Rebuilding Better

This fall we are reaping the fruits of our rebuilding efforts as our participation and volunteering rates have risen noticeably. Our alumni are giving back to their community as coaches on-court and members on committees. Their involvement on the ground will inspire the next cohort of participants to chase their dreams while learning the importance of active civic engagement.

As part of the rebuilding process, we are also engaged in developing a new economic development framework with 2 other sporting organizations. Our collective aim is to leverage our unique positions to increase employment and professional development for our young people. Stay tuned for more details as we deploy our new pilots!

This is both a trying and yet exciting time for our community. Let us continue to work together in both Toronto and Montreal to support and empower young people in participating fully in our beloved Canadian society.

THE VISION AHEAD

Beyond the physical benefits of sport, we believe there are untapped socio-economic opportunities through sport. We will be piloting projects to test and ascertain new models for increasing economic outcomes for our youth. Below is a glimpse of the work ahead.

"The Serving Up project allows me to give back to the community that I grew up in and to give people opportunities that I didn't have makes me feel like I'm doing something right." - Jordon C., Alumnus & Rexdale Youth Representative on Serving Up project committee

PROJECTS

Youth-led Project Management initiative

Serving Up project

Game Changer project

DETAILS

Supported by MBA students from Schulich Business School at York University, youth will design and execute a sporting project for residents in Rexdale

Pilot new economic development opportunities for youth with Jane/Finch Community Tennis Association & Philpott Children's Tennis

Apply equitable and trauma-informed perspectives into operations and governance

OUTCOMES

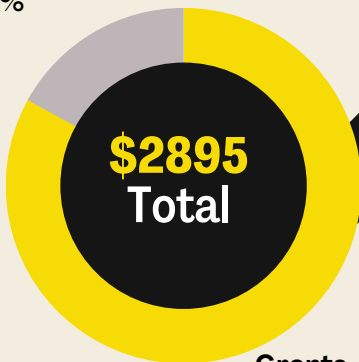

- Increase project management skills and business acumen for youth project manager(s)
- Increase new community event(s) for residents of Rexdale
- Increase employment and professional development opportunities for youth through coaching certification and operation of volleyball tournaments
- Increase organizational capacity for through education and training, and policy and procedure revision and development
